Teaching Tips

Teaching Tips

This resource includes:

- 3 Spring Dot-to-Dots with capital letters (I-3)
- 3 Spring Dot-to-Dots with lower case letters (4-6)
- 2 mazes with spring words to put in alphabetical order by the first letter only (I-2)
- 3 mazes with spring words to put in alphabetical order by the first 2 letters (3-5)

Most of your students will be familiar with dot-to-dot drawings. You may need to explain that they will connect the dots in alphabetical order, rather than number order. After they connect all of the dots, they can add more details and color their picture.

I recommend that you demonstrate the first few steps of the maze activity under the document camera before students start working on their own or with a partner.

- Show students how to circle a correct next word.
- Show students how to circle the letter between two correct words ("correct" means that they are in alphabetical order).
- Show students where the maze ends and where they will write the unscrambled mystery word, made up of all seven of the letters they've circled.
- If time permits, your upper elementary stu[illegible] of the boxed words on the back of the page and then put them in a list in alphabetical order.

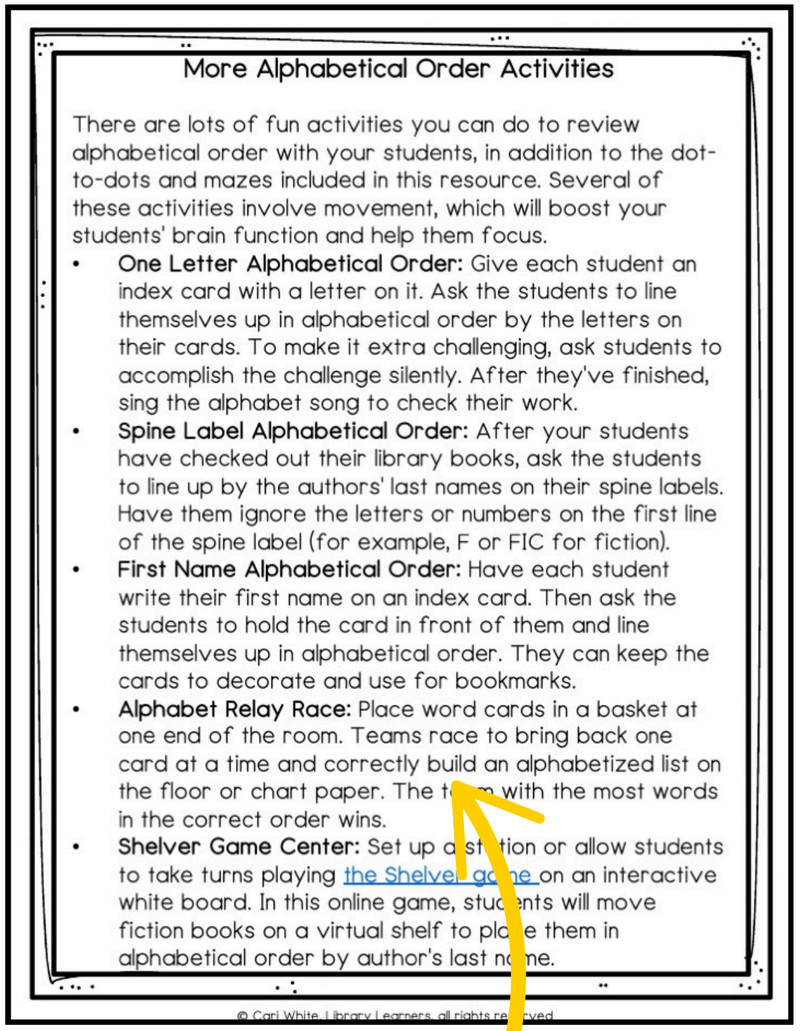

I hope this resource helps your students have fun as they practice alphabetical order, which will help them find books they'll love to read on your library shelves.

Happy reading!

More Alphabetical Order Activities

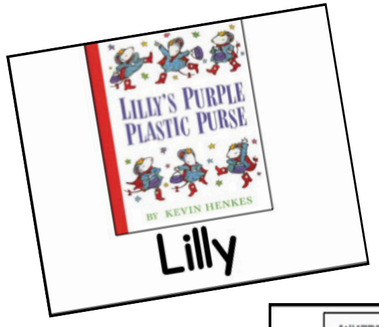

There are lots of fun activities you can do to review alphabetical order with your students, in addition to the dot-to-dots and mazes included in this resource. Several of these activities involve movement, which will boost your students' brain function and help them focus.

- One Letter Alphabetical Order: Give each student an index card with a letter on it. Ask the students to line themselves up in alphabetical order by the letters on their cards. To make it extra challenging, ask students to accomplish the challenge silently. After they've finished, sing the alphabet song to check their work.
- Spine Label Alphabetical Order: After your students have checked out their library books, ask the students to line up by the authors' last names on their spine labels. Have them ignore the letters or numbers on the first line of the spine label (for example, F or FIC for fiction).
- First Name Alphabetical Order: Have each student write their first name on an index card. Then ask the students to hold the card in front of them and line themselves up in alphabetical order. They can keep the cards to decorate and use for bookmarks.
- Alphabet Relay Race: Place word cards in a basket at one end of the room. Teams race to bring back one card at a time and correctly build an alphabetized list on the floor or chart paper. The t[illegible]m with the most words in the correct order wins.
- Shelver Game Center: Set up a st[illegible]tion or allow students to take turns playing the Shelver game on an interactive white board. In this online game, stu[illegible]nts will move fiction books on a virtual shelf to pla[illegible]e them in alphabetical order by author's last n[illegible]me.
